Lisa Jacobson is a private sector observer on the Clean Technology Fund (CTF) Trust Fund Committee, representing the Business Council for Sustainable Energy (BCSE), where she serves as the President. In this role, Ms. Jacobson has advised states and federal and international policymakers on energy, finance and climate change issues. Ms. Jacobson has represented clean energy industries before the United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change (UNFCCC) testified before the U.S. Congress. The BCSE and its network offer a global presence – with representation of regional groups across six continents. More specifically this includes the United States, Canada, United Kingdom, European Union, Australia, Latin America, Germany, Spain, Italy, UK, France, Sweden, Turkey, Poland, China, India, Japan, New Zealand, Brazil, Mexico, and Egypt. Prior to her position with the BCSE, Ms. Jacobson was a legislative aide to the U.S. Congress; received a Masters in International Relations from the London School of Economics and Political Science; and a Bachelors degree in Political Science from the University of Vermont.
